Integra Telecom Selects uReach Technologies as Exclusive Provider of Next-Gen Messaging Services

Phase One Roll Out Deploys Services to Customers in Idaho, Arizona and California

HOLMDEL, NJ (June 26, 2007) □ uReach Technologies (www.ureachtech.com), a leading provider of converged communications solutions for wireless, wireline and broadband carriers, has been named the exclusive provider of messaging services for Integra Telecom, Inc. Based in Portland, Ore. Integra owns and operates a best-in-class fiber-optic network, providing voice and data services to small to mid-sized businesses in eight Western states.

uReach deployed its Converged Services Framework™ (CSF) in just 12 weeks to begin delivering messaging applications to new customers in Phoenix, Boise, Idaho and Sacramento, Calif. on June 25. Integra plans to roll out the services companywide by the end of 2007.

“Our customers rely on maximizing communication in an efficient and reliable manner,” said John Nee, vice president of marketing for Integra Telecom. “After evaluating our options, we selected uReach’s solution for its technical superiority, ease-of-use and the company’s ability to rapidly deploy messaging services to our customers.”

The uReach CSF delivers converged calling and messaging solutions to some of the largest fixed line, mobile and broadband service providers in the world. Working with its customers, uReach has harnessed the power of converging networks to deliver solutions that provide both traditional messaging services and a seamless path for the deployment of revenue-generating converged calling and messaging applications.

“Integra is known industry wide for its customer service and small business support. uReach’s converged communications is providing the company with the tools necessary to maintain the company’s service reputation, while effectively moving beyond conventional messaging services,” said Mary Valentino, senior vice president of sales for uReach Technologies. “The partnership we’ve created allows for the delivery of innovative and converged messaging applications that meet the needs of Integra’s fast paced business clientele.”
